

Redmond to get new City Hall, park by 2010

by Bend_Weekly_News_Sources

For the past several months, the City of Redmond has been conducting a due diligence analysis necessary to support a city center RFQ / RFP project (Request for Qualifications / Request for Proposal).

After conducting the analysis, the city has elected to move forward with building a new City Hall and City Center Park in time to celebrate Redmond's Centennial in 2010.

In so doing, the city will be able to ensure a successful downtown redevelopment project for the City of Redmond.

Instead of issuing a RFQ / RFP to develop a public / private partnership with selected developers, the city will work with its architect to generate several City Hall / Park design options for the public to consider in early 2008 and prepare a request for construction bids later in 2008.
