ISLAMABAD, Pakistan -- A 5.1-magnitude earthquake shook parts of Pakistan Tuesday. There were no immediate reports of any damage or casualties. The U.S. Geological Survey said the epicenter of the temblor, which occurred just before 11 a.m., was about 65 miles northwest of Dera Ghazi Khan and 285 miles southwest of Islamabad. The USGA estimated the quake occurred at a depth of about 6.2 miles.
