

FedEx truck hijacked in New York City

by UPI

NEW YORK -- Armed assailants hijacked a FedEx delivery truck Friday when they assaulted the driver at a traffic signal in downtown New York City. Police said the assailants forced the driver into another vehicle and he was later found about 1:30 a.m. in Brooklyn, WNBC-TV in New York reported Friday. Two assailants threatened the driver, who was en route to the FedEx facility in Newark, N.J., police told the television station. Neither the driver nor the police had knowledge of the 18-wheel delivery truck's cargo. The driver suffered no injuries.

Copyright © 2007, by United Press International. All Rights Reserved.

FedEx truck hijacked in New York City by UPI