STOCKHOLM, Sweden -- Two buses collided head-on in central Sweden Thursday, killing one person and injuring as many as 60 others, police reported. The wreck involved a Russian tourist bus and a city bus near Gagnef, 150 miles northwest of Stockholm, The Local newspaper reported. Bo Eriksson, spokesman for Dalarna County Police, said seven of the 60 people hurt were listed in serious condition. It had been snowing before the crash but police hadn't determined a cause for the crash, local reports said.
