According to a Central Oregon Drug Enforcement (CODE) team news release, Ebbensgarrd had been under surveillance in and around Bend since detectives received credible information during the last few weeks that he was allegedly involved in a marijuana growing operation.

CODE detectives obtained a search warrant for Ebbensgarrd's vehicles and residence using the information gained from the surveillance, and with the assistance of Bend Police officers they executed the warrant about 3:30 p.m. November 21.

Detectives found false walls that were built into the attached garage, creating a hidden room used to conceal the growing operation, said Sgt. Scott Shelton. They also seized a sophisticated video surveillance system which monitored the exterior of the home.

About 65 marijuana plants in varying stages of maturity, a small amount of processed marijuana, gram quantity weight scales, and packaging bags were also seized.

According to Sgt. Shelton, the marijuana found in the drug raid had the potential to produce seven to eight pounds of usable product valued at $24,000.
