The driver, Sabas Rios Ruiz, 25, consented to a search of his vehicle.

The trooper, assisted by a drug-detecting dog, discovered 20 kilos of cocaine in what was described as a sophisticated rear false compartment hidden in the SUV.

Rios Ruiz was arrested and lodged in the Marion County Jail. With bail set at $2,000,000, the suspect is charged with possession, distribution, and conspiracy to distribute a controlled substance, OSP reported.

OSP Drug Enforcement Section detectives are continuing the investigation. Clackamas County Sheriff's Office and Portland Police Bureau have been assisting with the follow up investigation. The following are brief reviews of the previous two cases: * On October 19, 2007 at approximately 3:09 p.m. two Oregon State Police troopers, one with a drug detection canine, working traffic enforcement along Interstate 5 north of Salem saw a 2000 Chevrolet Tahoe sport utility vehicle with Washington license plates having difficulty maintaining a single lane of travel. The troopers stopped the vehicle with three occupants northbound near milepost 271 at the bottom of the off ramp to Woodburn. Oregon State Police Drug Enforcement Section detectives are continuing an investigation following the arrest of three men transporting 21 kilos of Cocaine and two pounds of crystal methamphetamine. Estimated value of the seized drugs is $500,000. * On January 19, 2008 at approximately 12:20 p.m. an OSP trooper stopped a 2005 Nissan Armada sport utility vehicle displaying out-of-state license plates northbound on Interstate 5 near milepost 253 for speed and lane change violations. During contact with the lone occupant, a 26-year old male, the trooper subsequently found 31 kilos of cocaine in a false compartment located in the rear cargo area. The approximately 66 pounds of cocaine has an estimated value of $600,000.
