FAISALABAD, Pakistan -- Exploding gas cylinders housed in a two-story building in Faisalabad, Pakistan, wrecked the structure, killing several people. Dawn newspaper reported Thursday that 14 died and 28 others were injured. Faisalabad is in Punjab province. The report quoted witnesses as saying the building also housed a freight vehicle depot, a tea stall and a welding shop. The building was razed by the blasts. Most of the trapped victims were vehicle drivers. The report said the cause of the blasts hadn't been determined.
