

One killed in Indian train attack

by UPI

HAFLONG, India -- A suspected militant attack on a train in the Indian state of Assam has reportedly left one person dead and another 14 critically injured.

The Press Trust of India reported Friday that the individual killed in the train attack was a Central Reserve Police Force officer, while all those injured were passengers on the Badarpur-Lumding Barak Valley Express.

Gunmen thought to belong to the Dima Haram Daogah militant group fired at the moving train from a hillside as the transport left Wadrenghisa station.

The unspecified number of gunmen fled into the jungle after the attack in the North Cachar hill district.

The Press Trust of India said police reinforcements were sent to search for the gunmen.

Copyright © 2009, by United Press International. All Rights Reserved.

One killed in Indian train attack by UPI