

Castillo honors Oregon schools for closing achievement gap

by Bend Weekly News Sources

(Salem, Oregon) — State Schools Superintendent Susan Castillo this week named the Oregon public schools that have made significant progress in closing the achievement gap. Each school named for the award has demonstrated progress in student achievement in math and reading and showed improvement in student achievement for minority and/or low income students. The schools will be recognized at a banquet on May 11th. This is the third year that Castillo has recognized schools for the Celebrating Student Success Awards, and each recipient will receive a $2,000 grant.

“These schools prove that students can overcome poverty, cultural differences, and other challenges and succeed,” Castillo said. “My goal has been to highlight examples of what is being accomplished in our public schools and send a very important message to all of Oregon about helping all children achieve. We are recognizing schools from all around the state that serve as an example for how we can close the achievement gap and ensure that every student has success in school.”
