Leading For Growth Reveals Secrets Behind Umpqua's Growth, Innovation

Umpqua Bank CEO Ray Davis' new book, Leading for Growth: How Umpqua Bank Got Cool and Created a Culture of Greatness, has been praised by business publications and leaders alike for its clear-cut take on innovative leadership. The book outlines the strategy Davis has relied on to take Umpqua Bank from a small, regional bank with $140 million in assets in 1994 to the internationally known company it is today with 134 stores and assets of more than $7 billion. Leading for Growth will be available in stores and online March 23. A portion of the proceeds from the sale of Leading for Growth will benefit early childhood and family education programs.

"Ray Davis is the real deal," said John A. Byrne, executive editor for BusinessWeek. "His book offers practical, straightforward advice for all business leaders on understanding the competitive landscape they face and on building and leading a great culture that generates relentless growth."

Leading for Growth describes Davis' strategies, which grew Umpqua Bank from a small Roseburg, Ore., bank 13 years ago to the West Coast's leading community bank with 134 store locations between Bellevue, Wash. and Sacramento, Calif. The company's culture is at the heart of its success, and Davis explains how others can address this often-overlooked asset.

"Ray Davis addresses many of the key issues we face in continuing to drive growth at Nike: staying connected with the consumer, leading change, building the brand, and cultivating a strong corporate culture," said Charlie Denson, president of Nike Brand. "He offers clear solutions and creative leadership approaches for all business leaders, regardless of industry."

In Leading for Growth, Davis offers specific lessons learned from his experiences in leading Umpqua on its distinctive path to success. In 13 years, Davis didn't just reinvent Umpqua Bank: his vision pushed the entire industry to embrace a retail-based approach to banking. He created Umpqua Bank building locations that are more bank store than branch with free coffee, product merchandising, and computer cafés.
