The Chicago Tribune reports the note was found in Cho's Harper Hall dorm room on the Blacksburg, Va., campus. Cho, 23, a legal permanent resident who came to the United States in 1992, was described as a loner by university spokesman Larry Hincker.

The Tribune said a note believed written by Cho, a senior English major, complained about "rich kids," "debauchery" and "deceitful charlatans" on campus.

Cho's body was found among the 31 dead at Norris Hall. Police still have not determined whether he shot and killed two other people at one of the dorms.
