

Infant remains found in Ocean City home

by UPI

OCEAN CITY, Md. -- Police searching the home of an Ocean City, Md., woman charged with killing her unborn child have found the remains of three more infants. Christy Freeman, 37, was arrested by Ocean City Police after a dead infant wrapped in a blanket was found at her home Thursday and was charged with first-degree murder, second-degree murder and manslaughter, the Delmarva Daily Times reported Monday. The FBI's evidence team assisted in the search that uncovered a garbage bag filled with what was believed to be remains from two other unborn children as well as a separate bag containing remains from another premature child. Freeman has only been charged with the death of the baby found Thursday.
