

Poker Pro's Corner: Short-handed game will play more hands

by Antonio Esfandiari

Q: In a $1-$2 no-limit six-handed cash game, am I playing a lot more hands because it is short-handed, or because the tables are usually pretty loose?

A: You are playing more hands because it is short-handed. If it is a really loose table you should play tighter, but for the most part because it is six-handed you want to play more hands.

Q: I find it very hard to lay down top pair. What sort of things am I looking for to know when I am beat?

- Broke in Biloxi

A: If someone is willing to go crazy with you on the flop, you bet, they raise, you reraise and they move in on you - well, then guess what, your top pair is no good!

Q: I enjoy check-raising the minimum out of position to a raise. It usually works - they fold and I take down the pot on a bluff. How can I tell when someone is making that same play on me?

- Wondering in Walla Walla, Wash.

A: I guess you have to use your reading abilities to figure out if they are weak or strong.

Q: I often find myself bluffing a lot of my chips away. How can I combat this? Should I even be bluffing if it never seems to work?

- Future Star, Milwaukee

A: If your bluffs aren't working, why keep trying them? Try playing a session where you don't bluff at all and see if you are more successful than the times that you do bluff.

Q: I never know when I should quit a game. How long should I be playing for?

- Twenty-Four/Seven, Hilbert, Wisc.

A: You should play until you are tired or the game is not good anymore.

Q: What is the best way to play the nuts when I flop it - nut flush or a full house? If I don't really have a reputation at my table, what is the best way to play it?

- Vicky, Las Vegas

A: You should bet it right out.
